

Women Have Sex-based Rights in Australia

Sex is whether you are a male or a female. There are times when sex doesn't matter very much, for instance working at a computer, writing a poem or taking a math test.

There are times when sex does matter. Male and female people have different bodies because of the different roles each plays in reproduction. Males and females respond to medications differently, males tend to be larger and stronger on average, and there are some patterns of behaviour particular to each of the sexes.

Women's Declaration International

Women's Declaration sets out 9 articles of women's sex-based rights.

Reaffirming that the rights of women are based upon the category of sex

Reaffirming women's right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association

Reaffirming the nature of motherhood as an exclusively female status

Reaffirming women's rights to political participation on the basis of sex

Reaffirming the rights of women and girls to physical and reproductive integrity

Reaffirming women's rights to the same opportunities as men to participate actively in sports and physical education

Reaffirming the need for the elimination of violence against women

Reaffirming the need for the protection of the rights of the child

Reaffirming women's right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association

Reaffirming women's rights to political participation on the basis of sex

Who are we?

Women's Rights Network Australia are a national organisation of everyday Australian women.

We come from all walks of life.

We advocate for the sex-based rights of women and girls.

Our goals

- We oppose laws that replace sex with gender identity
- We support ending male violence against women
- We oppose the medicalisation of gender confusion in children
- We support female-only spaces
- We advocate for the "women's category" in all sports to exclude males
- We support the rights of lesbians to associate in lesbian-only spaces without the presence of men
- We support freedom of opinion, free expression, peaceful assembly, political participation and freedom of association
